KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. A nobody and a somebodyVon Helen HancoxLady Portia Ellerslie is the widow of a famous war hero, a confidante of Queen Victoria and a woman with vast responsibilities because of her husband's memory. However she is also a woman of 28 with her own needs now that her elderly husband has died. When she decides to spend a night with a man she doesn't realise what difficulties will arise. Marcus Worthington was Portia's childhood infatuation. He's grown into a feckless rake but when Portia chooses him for her night of passion she begins to uncover a slightly different Marcus, one who is learning to fight for what he wants. But the barriers between them are enormous with Marcus a Nobody and Portia someone who the British nation loves because of her dead husband. Is there any way they can be together? This was a pleasant enough read with significant focus on the love affair but also a small assassination plot on the side. Portia was well portrayed as a rather Victorian-seeming woman whose emotions are mostly kept in check and who considers her sense of duty important. Marcus was sometimes a little difficult to like as he did seem rather feckless and self-indulgent. The villains of the book were rather pantomime-evil in their portrayal but overall it was a good read. Originally published for Curled Up With A Good Book, curledup.com. Helen Hancox 2008

Kurzbeschreibung One wicked night . . . Lady Portia Ellerslie, dearest confidante to Queen Victoria and a woman of impeccable breeding, normally wouldn't dream of dallying in Aphrodite's Club, London's most exclusive and erotic bordello. But one lonely night she finds something enticing about the idea of a wild encounter in the notorious hothouse. Donning a daring, dangerously low-cut scarlet dress and a veil to mask her identity, she arrives at the club ready to succumb to the torrid desires raging inside her . . . and is shocked to find herself gazing into the eyes of Marcus Worthington, the man she swooned over at seventeen. Could lead to a lifetime of ecstasy . . . Back then, Marcus barely knew she was alive, but now he's about to make her most wanton fantasies come true. Portia's proper life is about to change forever . . . because for Marcus one night with the lady in red could never be enough. From Publishers Weekly Bennett's latest skirt-lifter featuring Courtesan Aphrodite, a Victorian London madam, stars Portia, Lady Ellerslie, who's weary of living her life to honor her deceased husband, a war hero and favorite of the queen. Courtesan Aphrodite grants Portia's wish to spend one night at Aphrodite's establishment with the man of her choice. While in disguise at Aphrodite's Club, Portia encounters Marcus Worthington, a man she admired as a young girl before her marriage to elderly Lord Ellerslie. The two engage in a heated tryst, which leaves Marcus obsessed with uncovering the mystery woman's identity. The complexity of the novel increases dramatically when Portia must reconcile her desire for personal happiness with her duty to her country as she and Marcus continue their sizzling clandestine affair. An intriguing subplot involving vicious attempts to assassinate Queen Victoria adds depth and substance to this pleasing historical romance. (Jan.)
