Von Elaine Knighton : Beauchamp Besieged (Harlequin Historical) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Beauchamp Besieged (Harlequin Historical):

Von Valerie Bongards I just finished reading this book and really enjoyed it. It's a bit different than other medieval romances, in that this one has lots of action, and not the sensual kind, altho' there's that too, of course! But our hero is not only battling his own fears, phobias and secrets, and trying so very hard not to fall in love with the heroine, he is also battling a very vicious brother. So it all boils down to a hardened, bitter hero who needs to be melted by a sweet, but feisty young girl. I think our author has put together a real page turner, and I can highly recommend this book to anyone who likes their historicals a little more realistic and with a bite!

Kurzbeschreibung 'Twas Madness! The blood of her people stained his hands, yet Ceridwen ap Morgan ached for his touch. Though Lord Raymond Beauchamp sparked fear throughout the Marches, her woman's heart knew that this dragon of a man nursed secret wounds in his soul. And she must wed this enigma. She shuddered but was it from darkest dread or deepest desire? Treaties Be Hanged! Raymond Beauchamp saw no advantage in wedding Ceridwen. Her very presence raised unwelcome ghosts of memory, and marriage to anyone would only interfere with older, darker vows he'd made. Yet he feared 'twas already too late! For his blood, once hot for revenge against his barbaric brother, now burned only for her!

ber den Autor und weitere Mitwirkende Elaine Knighton grew up in California, riding her horse through the grassy, windswept hills and dreaming of romantic, heroic adventures. Now she lives in the misty and mystical Pacific Northwest and writes about romantic, heroic adventures instead of only dreaming about them. Elaine has roots in Poland, England and Scotland, a mixture in which there may be some hope of finding a balance between passion and reason, but she thinks she'll always be a dreamer at heart... / Elaine would love to hear from you.
