M.A crisply written and suspensefully told novel about friends, fiends, lovers and the supernatural changes they're going through amidst a fog of secrets."Fright Radio" is read in one sitting as there are no filler-chapters or unnecessary parts to get the better of it. The change of character perspective, time and, at parts, even format (there is a paragraph written in screenplay form which was very nicely done and interweaved cleverly into the chapter), keeps one's interest up and engaged in the story that consists of surprising twists and turns. The refreshing dialogue, as well as the thought-provoking inner monologue, give the novel a unique touch and brings the characters more so to life. I recommend this novel to fans of literature about young adults and the supernatural, as it combines both in a fresh and unexpected way. As the first part of a series, "Fright Radio" successfully manages to open a door to another world among us that we cannot wait to read more about.

Kurzbeschreibung "Hello, hello, hello, and welcome to Marble Waves. My name is Regina Marble, and you're listening to Fright Radio. If you're a vampire, a werewolf, a shapeshifter or a witch, please register on our website. If you're a ghost, you're very welcome to haunt it instead." On the hill behind the university, Amy sits in her new car, listening to her friend's radio programme. With her eyes set on the full moon, she lights a cigarette. In thirty minutes, she will no longer be human. Meanwhile, Amy's brother, Jo has just said goodnight to his boyfriend and he's rushing back to his room to catch the show. As he reaches the door, a whisper startles him. It's a voice calling his name... and it belongs to his best friend, who killed himself a year ago. As morning slowly dawns across the small southeastern town, a handwritten note arrives at someone's house: "I hope you burn in hell for what you did to me." And then a murder changes everything...
