Dialogues are very refreshing, cheeky and funny. I'd most definitely read this again1 von 1 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. sweet,

different, entertaining
Von Julia
For once, the characters actually have a relationship outside the bedroom. There is a certain depth in the characters, the story and the writing. No pathos (i love you soo much blabla), but a display of genuine affection. Sophia and Wil connect intellectually, erotically and emotionally - that makes it a refreshing read

Von Bettina Jahnsehr leicht und schnell zu lesen ausserdem sind die Personen nicht so langweilig wie oft in dieser Art von Romanen.

Kurzbeschreibung
2012 National Reader's Choice Award Winner
2012 Golden Heart Finalist
One mistake could lead to capture and entrapment in a marriage Anne-Sophie Duncombe would rather die than endure. Her only choice is a radical scheme a life of humility and disguise, a life of exile.
Wilhelm Montegue, the Earl of Devon, is insane. At least thats what everyone says. But who could blame them? Hes a tormented war hero surrounded by scandal. And his unmentionable condition keeps him confined to his country home. His only saving grace is his brilliant mind and unquestionable talent for composing beautiful music.
When a new housemaid is hired at Rougemont, Lord Devon is perplexed to find himself fascinated by her. He knows the exquisite beauty is keeping secrets, but her siren's voice draws him in and he can't resist the intoxicating scent of danger surrounding her.

Moriah Densley sees nothing odd at all about keeping both a violin case and a range bag stuffed with pistols in the back seat of her car. They hold up the stack of books in the middle, of course. She enjoys writing about Victorians, assassins, and geeks. Her muses are summoned by the smell of chocolate, usually at odd hours of the night. By day her alter ego is your friendly neighborhood music teacher. She lives in Las Vegas with her husband, four children, and two possibly brain-damaged cats. Published in historical and paranormal romance, Moriah has a Master's degree in music, is a 2012 RWA Golden Heart finalist, 2012 National Reader's Choice Award winner in historical romance and '12 NRCA "Best First Book" finalist.
