EnchantedVon Anna SalamatinEdit ReviewDelete ReviewThis review is from: Spooktacular Seductions (Kindle Edition)I found this collection of stories to be wonderfully entertaining....BEWITCHING GYPSY by, Linda Carroll-Bradd is Fiona Mikelas Hagan Fletcher's story. How their paths cross and then cross again by the guiding hand of the goddess. Love and acceptance is given and received, just as a family is gained where one was lost. Fiona travels alone now with her wagon and wolf hound. She lost her husband and son to influenza. She prays to the goddess, she is weary of being alone. One day a baby girl is left there. She carries the same mark ad Fiona. The mark of the witch. Fiona is happy for a babe to love. Then one day a stranger stumbles in to her encampment. He is shot and is soon delirious with fever.....THE GARDEN OF SOULS by, Michelle Ziegler.....Is the story of Miranda who lives on the edge of a graveyard which she calls her garden of souls. She meets Thomas at the gate in the evening because, well, Thomas is a ghost. Her friend Beth is always trying to pull her towards life, the living and towards Sean. Beth tells her the Halloween party is to be held at her house this year and Miranda resigns herself to it. Miranda is pulled in two different directions. She loves Thomas, but she craves a real life too. The night of the party, on All Hallows Eve, Thomas comes to her door as a real man. He tells her it will last this one night.....IF THIS MADNESS by, Echo Shea.....It's All Hallows Eve. Bernice puts on the black dress that makes her look every bit the hag that she is. The black pointed hat, and viola! A witch. She has cursed enough men to know how vindictive her heart really is.....but everyone who comes into her convenience store calls her Mama and her Cade has always been Papa.Forever parents with no children. The trick or treaters are starting to arrive, if anyone see's Papa they don't mention it.....Now, as she takes the body to the river, she doesn't know how to say good bye after seventy of the happiest years of her life. Is it so wrong not to want to let him go? He steps into the river and lies down inside his corpse.....She dreams of them, they are young and he shows her in the waters reflection how he has always seen her, beautiful. He can do things now that he couldn't before. How can this be so she says, I let him go. Yes, he says to her. You let go, but I never did.....THE GHOST OF A CHANCE by, Lily Carlyle.....Julie has no idea why she let her friend Becky talk her into going to the bar, when almost at once she deserted her to hook up with some guy. She nods to Joe, the bartender for her usual and takes a big swig as soon as he gives it to her. She sputters as she says, theres alcohol in this and Joe tells her that ones on him, as he gestures to the end of the bar. She looks and sees Sean. A little over a year ago he left her sad, shocked and broken hearted. Now he's back. He just got into town a few hours ago. He is here for work, but can't say anything else about it. He does however want to talk to her, and your never in a million years going to guess why.DO YOU BELIEVE IN GHOSTS? by, Anne Higa.....Jeff Austin LeGrange is coming back to his childhood home, his home now that his mother has passed away. And sure enough, there she is standing in the front door behind the screen waiting for him. Martha Austin LeGrange is a psychic medium, part of a long line and had tried to teach Jeff, unsuccessfully. He resigned his job in order to come home to the quite little town of Sunshine Hills in central Pa. He found a job as a warehouse clerk at the feed store just outside of town. But things are not going to stay quite as Jeff runs into and becomes reacquainted with Alice Hopkins. They were each others firsts, but they went off to different collages and went their own way.Alice was still in love with Jeff and was pleased when he asked her and her father over for Valentines day dinner. She believes in ghosts and would like to see Martha again. Her father didn't want to go. Something about an old family feud. He said, for a while there I though....oh never mind. You can never go back. Or can you?ENCANTADO by, Havva Murat.....Remy stands out side Great Adventure, New Orleans. The park never reopened after hurricane Katrina. He is here to drink some beers with his friend Marcos, his girl Delphine, and his little sister Rafaela, who always told Remy that he robbed a jewelry store because his eyes were two different colors. One is as blue as sapphire and the other is as green as an emerald. She has a crush on Remy and he likes her too, but Marcos would kill then. So Marcos and Del go into the tunnel to be alone while Remy and Raf climb up to the third seat on the ferris wheel and pop a beer. They chat and tease for a while until he goes in for a kiss and bam, something hits him on his shoulder.He figures it's an old screw falling from above.He leans in again and another missile hits him on the back of his head.Raf feels his head and finds blood. Just as he is seeing the blood another missile hits him on the chin. Blood runs down his neck.He yells to Marcos that he's going to rip his head off and Raf is yelling for Marcos to stop it. In answer, another missile hits him and breaks a front tooth. He crashes back into the leather seat. You broke my effing tooth, your a dead man he yells to Marcos as he is climbing down.He sees movement in the grass and gives chase. The shadow disappears into the tunnel where Marcos and Del went. He comes up on Marcos and is kicking him as both of them tell Remy that Marcos never left here. Just then they hear Raf scream. They only find blood and shredded clothes....they never found her body. Remy comes home after six months in juvie for trespassing and under age drinking. Marcos ran and let Remy take the heat.he comes home to a drunken father. But Marcos sees him and wants to know what he did with Rafs body. He verbally goes at him and tells him to meet him at the park to finish this at sundown.....Remy is there and they are going at each other until a voice says, ENOUGH!....the voice belongs to a shimmering red head in a tight crimson dress. Remy looks into her eyes and one is blue, the other is green.....WHERE ANGELS TREAD by, Christy Thomas.....This is a truly interesting take on Angels, their different devine missions and the role they play in the human realm. Time is different also. What seems like months to the Angels, is years on the human plane. All souls have an aura which is a color. When the aura fades to nothing, the soul has left the the body. This is when the Angel of death swings his scythe and severs the cords holding the soul to their loved ones. He then delivers the soul to their guardian Angel who ascends them to heaven. This is a story within a story within yet another story. Samael, one of the Angels of death. Lorelei, a wife that takes council with a fortune teller and comes away with something remarkable. A little seven year old girl who is at the end of her time on the human plane. And the Michael the Arc Angel will make an appearance as well....this one left me thinking, what if.....'SPOOKY HOLLOW CAFE' by, Lisa Adams.....Aggie is the owner of this cafe'. She is also a witch. The tourists are always happy when they leave. It's a little something special in her tea and of course the rumors of ghosts, which sometimes make an appearance that keeps them coming. Unfortunately, she can't keep the help coming back after they learn the rumors are all true. Once they meet the twins, Roderick and Elizabeth in their Victorian splendor, they never return. So when Jason Whitmore sees the help wanted sign in the window and enters, he is hired and starts working right then and there. After all, he doesn't believe in the paranormal. He is taken by Aggie and her beauty. Aggie seems to return the feeling. Roderick wants Aggie for himself, and despite the warning of banishment from Aggie, Roderick declares war on Jason.....I was simply captivated and enchanted by this collection of amazing tales. I do recommend this as a must read. I was gifted this book in return for my honest review.
